American Cleaning worked hard on getting our home repaired from a water leak. We did have a few hiccups throughout the process but it came together with the help of Jeff Hernandez. As always stay on top and key is the communication with any company.

I felt disrespected by American Cleaning & Restoration. I feel as though because my home is older it did not receive respect. The same work had to be completed multiple times. I still have a crooked bathroom floor and I am not happy with the work but, I signed off on it because, if they can't get the job done right after four tries I don't believe they ever will and it is too stressful to keep having the work done over and over. Also, the cleaning staff stole items out of my home. I was reimbursed after signing the certificate of completion.

We worked with David Weinheimer (Project Manager) at American C&R. David was extremely attentive to our concerns. He would return our telephone calls/e-mails within 24-36 hours. And, on more important matters, he would stop by the house and talk to us directly. At all times, we knew he was doing his best to get the repair work completed to our full satisfaction.

ACR has been a great company to work with throughout this process. They are responsive and flexible, and stand behind the quality of their work. Prior to beginning work, I would request reviews and additional information about the contractor who will be assigned to your job. They will work with you to get the right person on the job.

DO NOT USE THEM

American Cleaning & Restoration themselves were great to deal with. They were professional and responsive. I would advise you, the insured, to request information about the tradesmen that they contract before you are committed to using them. I wish we would have done that. I am continuously noticing things that were done sloppy.

The whole procedure from start to finish was not very professional except for the first group of workers. I made many phone calls starting with the claims adjuster (who did not do a very good job) to the people at American Cleaning. Two different people came to measure and neither one told the people gave the information on to the people going to do the work.

They did an excellent job and I am very happy and satisfied with the work they did for me. There was a little bit they missed down in my basement. Other than that, they did a heck of a job. They forgot to put some drywall up under the stairs but I just left it alone. I was going to call them back but I do not want any more dust in the house because they just brought my clothes back today. I do not want the dust in my house anymore. It was a piece of drywall and I do not why they did not put it back.

The representative and crew were very helpful in answering my questions. The crew was very careful not to damage any personal items as they were ripping out the drywall. The only thing I wish they've done better is check every area of the floor the work was being done to make sure all debris and drywall dust was cleaned up. I found in the corner of my room that there was some drywall dust still visible from a few feet away. It's no biggie.

It is great to have a trade attend to details and carry out everything well. Obviously when something needs restoration, it is always stressful, but this company is way above the curve. What they say, they do and they do what is needed,
