My construction person Ron out of Marion, Ohio was very professional. He was good, he knew his stuff, and he could guide me if I was going to make an error in judgment. I worked very closely with him and I felt like he was excellent.

I liked that they let me design it, but that they would also help guide me. Sometimes maybe they would have some information that I wasn't really considering that would make it less likely that things were going to get done exactly my way, and that was helpful. I had a lot of freedom within the bounds of what was practical and logistically possible. They guided me in those areas and I learned from the experience what parameters could be done and what things were impossible or would create problems.
