Make sure you double check in every single step you take towards purchasing your home. We had many setback and mistakes in our process. 1) house was build on incorrect lot 2)appliances like cook top, oven, microwave Were mounted wherever it was cheaper for them. When in the first place we were advised that they will be build in.3) shower door wasn't installed supposedly because it didn't come with the price . When in selections they told us they would put a clear door . Had to install our own . 4) edges on walls are cracking, paint falling off. Windows are not place correctly . 5) now waiting on stucco repair for 6 months.

Contractors/sub-contractors perform the fastest alternative to build-out instead of quality first for the customer. general mistakes are many and we had to fight for every little touch-up. Plumbers did not locate main water line PVC within pouring of foundation. Wash machine water valves reversed in temperature (hot/cold line) 4 attempts to fix cracked cabinet doors over a 5 week period. They wear you down instead of taking issues seriously. Superintendent and project manager are abrasive, lacking proactive communication skills, nor empathy for the customer. They strong-arm customers and dissuade them to site visit home while under construction. Home buyers should participate in a quality build and see/sign-off on weekly milestones.

Moving from California was an adjustment. But, finding that with this beautiful development the term "NO HOA Fees" is unbelievable. My friends from California continue to think there is a hidden catch. Brittany Hinojosa has assured me it real. I am looking forward to moving into this beautiful community.

I never thought about building a home from scratch, but the market is so saturated with sub-par homes that are overpriced. I approached this community with a healthy dose of skepticism; I kept asking myself, "what's the catch?" There is no catch, but you have to be forward-thinking and anticipate the growth that the RGV is going to experience in the coming years. The process of building our own home with Esperanza has been exceptional up to this point--now, we're looking forward to a smooth move once the home is built. Sam is an awesome, professional salesperson who knows the community and its products thoroughly.
