They are fairly easy to deal with but they have some issues. They use a lot of sub par products to keep the price down. We are in a different market from them and they need to adjust their price to fit in with the market.

The house is structurally sound. The one drawback is some of the finishing.

I would never recommend Manuel Builders. I've already prevented two of my friends from using this contractor. My home was built with the cheapest materials at a very expensive price. My "upgraded" paint job is HORRIBLE!!!

Other than the parish required permits that Manuel Builders cannot do themselves the building process has been a very easy and pain free process!

I am satisfied with the quality of interior of the home. Though I have several punchlist items that I still need completion. I feel extremely confident that once I turn in my list of what all needs to completed, Manuel Builders will complete this list to my satisfaction. Exterior, mechanics and placement of items I am partially satisfied. Even though home is "to code", I think there is more that could be done in the attic to help with energy efficiency. There are no fans in the attic to help release heat. Also, I have never owned a home (2 in Baton Rouge, 3 in Houston), where the utility/breaker box is located on the outside of the home. This is a safety concern for me. Cleaning of outside of home was not a very good job. I cleaned all my own windows and will need to get someone out to wash home.

They do good work, some of their contractors are very professional with exception of maintaining construction site. A lot of trash and nails everywhere.

Brad and everyone I worked with at Manuel Builders, delivered in every aspect of building our dream home. My wife and I had a baby in the middle of our build, and when our son went into the NICU they cared enough to send us decorations for our son's nursery for the new house. Throughout everything, my building team kept this whole experience enjoyable and worry free for us. I would recommend this company and Brad Anderson to anyone, they are truly great!
